Day 1

If open, before the trek begins, you will visit the Chemin de la Liberté Museum in St Giron.

Then the trek begins! Starting at St. Giron, you'll pass through La Soumère and the Louis-Barreau and Camp Memorial, before finishing in Aunac where you'll spend the night. By this time, you would have hiked for approximately 8-9 hours, ascending 712m and covering 12km.

As you can see, there are stunning views as you climb higher into the mountains.

Day 2

Starting at Aunac, you will head through the forest and contour around the hillside up the Col de la Core. Once the hard slog up is finished you'll arrive at Subera Hut, where you'll spend the night wild camping in a meadow. Tents will be provided and they'll be erected by our camp team. All you need to do is relax and take in the breathtaking scenery.

By the time you're huddled around the campfire, you would have trekked between 6-9 hours, covering around 13km and reaching up to 1500m.

Day 3

You'll start at Subera hut and start a challenging day into mountainous terrain. You'll pass the crash site of a Halifax bomber which has been left untouched in memoriam. You will then continue to ascent up to the Estagnous Refuge, where you'll spend the night. You will have covered another 11km and ascended 2382m. Time to enjoy a well-deserved drink overlooking the Pyrenees!

Day 4

On your final day, Spain, is nearly in sight! You will ascend an extremely steep path to Lac Long. In places there is a ferrata cableway to assist you, though no technical experience is needed. You'll then cross a deep gully, before an arduous slog to the peak ascent (2522m), where you will gaze into the luscious Spanish landscape, or for those who fled during World War Two - freedom.

After reaching the border, you will then be transported to Vielha, where you'll enjoy a celebration meal and have the opportunity to explore Spain.
